

Lil' WILDLIFE WARRIORS

A wildlife warrior is someone who loves to explore and protect nature and all its creatures.

Their mission is to save endangered species from extinction by devising crafty ways to raise funds and awareness for wildlife. Anyone can become a wildlife warrior regardless of age by taking action to show you care. Children in particular make awesome warriors because they represent nature's first defense and best hope for the future. In support of Lil' warriors and their noble purpose, Operation Wild Child was created to provide resources and opportunities for children to make a difference for the animals.

HOW IT WORKS

Step one: Start brainstorming ideas or search through the OWC resources for a fundraising initiative that appeals to you.

Step two: Check out the links on our Ambassadors page to select which charity you wish to raise funds for. When you choose Bart the Bear the money raised will go towards the protection of Vital Ground. But, if you have a soft spot for big cats then perhaps you would like to do something to save the Cheetah or the elusive and agile, Snow Leopard.

Step three: Download the application form below and email to:

karinga22@optusnet.com.au making sure to type "I want to be a lil' wildlife warrior" in the subject line or ask your parents to help.

Step four: Bare Essentials will then arrange prizes and additional resources for approved candidates. If selected you will be asked to take photos of your event or project and write about the experience. This information will then appear on our warrior profiles page naming you as an official Lil' Warrior and acknowledging your efforts to save wildlife!
